OPINION OF THE COURT

PER CURIAM

Michael Ikelionwu, a prisoner proceeding pro se, filed a complaint under the Federal Tort Claims Act (“FTCA”) seeking damages for personal property allegedly misplaced by Bureau of Prisons (“BOP”) officials. Ikelionwu appeals from the District Court order dismissing his complaint for lack of subject matter jurisdiction pursuant to Rule 12(b)(1) of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure. We have jurisdiction pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 1291. Because the appeal does not present a substantial question, we will summarily affirm. See 3d Cir. LAR 27.4; 3d Cir. IOP 10.6.

I

In February 2005, Ikelionwu filed an administrative tort claim with the BOP, seeking damages in the amount of $20,000,000 for the loss of his personal property and legal documents, which were allegedly misplaced during his transfer from F.C.I. Fort Dix to F.C.I. Allenwood. The BOP offered Ikelionwu $150 to settle the claim, which he rejected. Ikelionwu then filed a FTCA claim against John Nash, the warden at F.C.I. Fort Dix, in federal district court and subsequently amended his complaint to include the United States as a defendant.

In March 2008, Defendant-Appellee Nash filed a Rule 12(b)(1) motion to dismiss, alleging that the Supreme Court’s recent decision in Ali v. Fed. Bureau of Prisons, 128 S. Ct. 831 (2008), deprived the District Court of jurisdiction over the case. The District Court agreed and dismissed the complaint. Ikelionwu filed a timely notice of appeal.

II

The District Court dismissed Ikelionwu’s complaint pursuant to Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(b)(1), reasoning that the doctrine of sovereign immunity bars Ikelionwu’s claim under the FTCA. The FTCA provides “a limited waiver of sovereign immunity, making the Federal Government liable to the same extent as a private party for certain torts of federal employees acting within the scope of their employment.” United States v. Orleans, 425 U.S. 807, 813 (1976). This waiver includes “claims . . . for money damages . . . for injury or loss of property . . . caused by the negligent or wrongful act or omission of” a government employee. 28 U.S.C. § 1346(b)(1). However, an exception to the waiver of immunity applies to claims against “law enforcement officers” arising from the “detention of any goods, merchandise, or other property.” 28 U.S.C. § 2680(c). BOP officials accused of misplacing prisoner property fall within the ambit of § 2680(c). See Ali, 128 S. Ct. at 835. Accordingly, the District Court correctly concluded that it lacks subject matter jurisdiction based on the doctrine of sovereign immunity.

Ikelionwu argues that sovereign immunity is waived in his case because 1) the BOP settlement offer informed him that he could institute a suit against the United States if he did not accept the settlement; and 2) Defendant-Appellee Nash admitted in his first motion to dismiss that Ikelionwu’s suit was properly filed under the FTCA. Because “neither courts nor government officials can effectuate” a waiver of sovereign immunity, Governor of Kansas v. Kempthorne, 516 F.3d 833, 844 (10th Cir. 2008), we agree with the District Court that Ikelionwu’s arguments lack merit. Accordingly, we summarily affirm the judgment of the District Court.
